

Amber is a Roosevelt County native and third generation agriculturist. With a strong family heritage of dry-land farming, ranching, and a dairy cattle operation; she is passionate about agriculture and Roosevelt County.

After graduating from Dora High School, she pursued her post-secondary education at New Mexico Junior College followed by Eastern New Mexico University. She graduated with a Master's in Communication in 2003.

Amber pursued a wide range of experience in communications and leadership. She started her career at the Roosevelt County Chamber of Commerce and then progressed to Eastern New Mexico University. Upon graduating, she moved to Texas for three years. While in Texas, she consulted with various companies for public relations, marketing and advertising. Amber also worked for a small, family-owned manufacturing company in Dallas specializing in marketing, development and management. Upon returning home to Roosevelt County, Amber began working at Roosevelt General Hospital. During her eight year stint at the hospital, she was program administrator for Arise Sexual Assault Services for six years and director of marketing, public relations and hospitality for three years.

Amber and her husband Clint reside in Roosevelt County with their three children.
